

Multivariate analysis is used to study relationships among multiple agricultural features simultaneously within the crop recommendation dataset. Visualization techniques such as countplot are used to analyze environmental parameters including Nitrogen, Phosphorous, Potassium, temperature, humidity, pH, and rainfall. This analysis helps identify agricultural patterns and supports intelligent crop prediction and smart farming optimization workflows.